

The children walk through the palace with Tut. As the children walk into the throne room they are amazed by the sight of the King and Queen sitting eloquently on large thrones.

"Father, Mother.." Tut says as he approaches his parents.

"Tut!" Says the Queen as she rushes over and hugs him.

"Son, why do you insists on wandering off. Do you know how dangerous it is for a child to wander off without adult supervision?" Says his Pharaoh.

"Father I believe that I understand now." Tut says.

"You do?" Asks the Queen.

"Yes." Tut says." My new friends here helped me to realize how unsafe it is. Especially for a child." Says Tut.

The King and Queen look at him in disbelief.

"I am impressed. Who are these new friends of yours?" Asks the King.

"This is Nico and Kyra.. they are visiting from Capital City." Tut explains.

"Capital City... I have never heard of this Kingdom. Is it in the West or the East?" Asks the Queen.

"It is far away, and we must get back to our parents before they worry."
Says Kyra.

"Very well I will have the guards take you back to them. Where are they?"
Asks the King.

"They are back in the market where we met the Prince." Says Nico.

"Guards! Take these children back to the city. Whatever it is that you have said to my son, it has had a profound impact on him. Perhaps he needed to hear this from someone his own age. Thank You?" Says the King.

"You are welcome." Says Kyra.

"Go safely children." Says the Queen.

"Thank you your highness." Say Nico and Kyra.
